

Lushnja, Oct. 16, 1954

Dear Luan,

We are all well. We wish the same for you. I have written you always but have received no reply and do not know the reason why. I have sent your letters to the Karafili address but have not gotten a single answer from you.

Although I have not heard from you, I am compelled by the sufferings I and your sisters and brothers are undergoing to write you that I need your help. Our situation is as I have described it before in other letters (if you have received them). We are very badly off; we are all sick and have no possibility of improvement, particularly Victor and myself who are quite ill and need medicines and food.

Victor is very weak. He is nothing but skin and bones. Tefta suffers with her children since she is not able to care for them properly. Neçi and Veronica are in the same state. Tomor and Leka are in prison and of course are not well. They ask me for help but I do not know how to help them. That is why I write to you asking you to help in any way possible because I don't know how to face the situation as it is.

I beg you in my own name and in those of your sisters and brothers to send help and especially money because there is no one else with whom I can share my burdens. Think about us a little and assist us now that the postal system is operating more regularly.

Write and tell me how you are.

I close my letter with embraces and kisses for all of you with love.
